Universidade Lusofona de Humanidades e Tecnologias
EUROPEAN TEACHERS WORKSHOPS : NEW MEDIA

Professional meetings for European cinema, television and new media teachers involved in creative new media curricula.

The aim of this discussion forum is to provide teachers with a structured framework in which to share their individual experience. Participants analyze their own teaching methods, compare them with those of their colleagues working in different schools and environments, write together new exercises.

Teachers from 15 European film and new media schools take part in this bi-annual forum.

TEACHING INTERACTIVITY : CRITICAL MEDIA
21 – 23 October, 2004,
Universidade Lusofona de Humanidades e Tecnologias, Lisbon

Since several years already, various forms of social, political and technology criticism express themselves through new media, such as interactive art installations, new media projects and internet space. The workshop will focus on exploring this landscape and on studying some of the most original projects, in a teaching perspective.

What aspects of these new concepts should be taught, and how ? Should we encourage students to produce critical work ? And should it be a reflection on new media, or rather a tentative to promote a content driven media in order to avoid technology centered experimentation ?
